"What will the doctor do with his former wife now that he knows she is insane?" asked Nell Morton as she sat by Olive's bed holding the baby in her lap. Olive would not allow the child out of her sight since it had been restored to her arms.

"He certainly will have her put somewhere where they keep a careful watch on the patients. I shall never breathe freely again till she is locked up somewhere. I think she would not stop short of killing it if she got her hands on it again." Olive shuddered as she spoke.

"Did the doctor see her; talk to her?" asked Nell. Olive nodded. "It must have been hard for him," commented Nell. "I would not like to face her. I was always afraid of her ever since she came into my room and raved at me as she did. It was terrible." Nell shuddered in memory of the experience.

"I never was afraid of her, as you know, but I could not see her now. I have lost all my nerve these last few days." Olive closed her eyes wearily.

"No wonder!" exclaimed Nell. "You have been through enough to take the nerve from anyone. But you have her again, the darling." Nell squeezed the baby to her heart.

"Did the doctor tell you about the interview with her?" asked Nell, returning to the subject of conversation. "Yes. He asked her why she had remained in hiding all these months, allowing him to think she was dead, and she replied, 'Because I was trying to think of some way to get revenge on you. When I saw the announcement of the birth of your child in the paper I thought I could strike you through the baby, and I did,' she added triumphantly. 'Of course I had to wait till it was old enough to be taken away from its mother.'

"Think of this time and staying there in the asylum to carry it out," breathed Nell.

"The superintendent out there says she has been very much more unmanageable since the baby was found, has had spells of raving and has had to be locked up once or twice." Olive patted the tiny hand lying on Nell's arm.

"Oh, think of her having the darling in her power," shuddered Nell, clasping the child close.

"Think of it!" repeated Olive. "Well, it accounts for all the awful things she did. I always said she acted like an insane woman," continued Nell.

"It is the result of letting her evil jealous temper run away with her," said Olive fiercely.

"Don't you think she meant to keep the baby?" asked Nell.

"She meant to make us both all the trouble she could. I suppose she knew we would find the baby sooner or later. She meant to keep us in agony as long as possible."

"Well, thank God, she will be kept in a place where she can do no more harm from now on," said Nell.

"The doctor has made arrangements to have her placed in a sanitarium where she will have the best of care, but will be carefully watched," was Olive's comment.

NEW THINGS SEEN IN FASHION'S SHOPS

Even the new raincoat nighties show a decided flare at the skirt's edge, for a circular dounce is added to effect the extra width.

After skating comes cycling—and then fitting apparel for this diverting sport, which has captured Palm Beach—at least the feminine contingent.

Oilecloth skirts are the newest fancy for sports and are especially adapted for cycling. Norfolk jackets, of cotton suede cloth, are also considered smart, if they are leather-trimmed.

Veils, which always accompany the sportswoman of southern resorts, have a fashion this season that strikes an Oriental note. They are draped a la harem.

Capes are the most insistent note in the latest budget from Paris. Capes are embroidered to trim the new blouses. On one seen recently capes emerged from either side of a shield-like front and back portion. Hand embroidery and small silver buttons also add in trimming this blouse of blue charmeuse.

EASTER ICES.

Strawberry Ice Cream.
For strawberry ice cream, boil together two cupsful of sugar and four of water for half an hour. Then add two quarts of strawberries and cook for a quarter of an hour longer. Freeze, and when the dasher is removed, fold in a pint of whipped cream.

Strawberry Pudding.

Strawberry pudding is a more elaborate strawberry frozen dessert, but is really worth the trouble.

To make it, heat a pint of milk, add an ounce and a half—three table-spoonfuls—of sugar, a piece of stick cinnamon and a few shreds of lemon peel, and then the beaten yolks of four eggs. Cook until smooth and thick, and strain into a cold dish. Cool and add a quart of strawberries, mixed with half a cupful of sugar, and rubbed through a sieve. Freeze in a ring mold and turn out on a dish and fill the center with fresh, slightly sweetened strawberries. Or else freeze and serve in dessert glasses, with a few ripe, large strawberries in each glass.

Pineapple Pudding.

Boil together two cupsful of water and two of sugar until thick, and then pour on two ounces of gelatine softened in cold water. Strain and cool, and add the juice of a ripe pineapple, half a cupful of maraschino cherries, and shredded, blanched almonds, and a pinch of salt. Pack in a mold in an ice and salt for two hours.

At The Ogden—Submarines, Torpedoes, The Navy, All Made Use of for Strong Plays.

Charles Richman, the hero of "The Battle Cry of Peace," in his new play, "The Hero of Submarine D-2," Sunday and Monday.

The United States navy of the present day is shown in all its branches in the new Vitaphone feature release, "The Hero of Submarine D-2." Through special authority given by the naval departments the film company was permitted to command the activities of the Atlantic squadron and penetrate with their camera heretofore restricted territory at Annapolis, Newport and Newport News. This is the biggest and most graphic photograph of the navy ever shown.

The picture was written by Cyrus Townsend Brady and produced under the direction of Paul Scardon and features Charles Richman, James Morrison, Eleanor Woodruff, Zena Keefe and others in a drama replete with tense moments. The director made use of his authority from the secretary of the navy and showed splendid scenes on the dreadnaughts, destroyers and submarines. Prominent naval officials, among them being Commandant R. K. Crank, of the General Recruiting Service; Captain Louis M. Milton, commandant of Midshipmen; Lieut. Roger K. Welles, head of the Naval Trade Station at Newport; and Lieutenant Commander Francis Taylor Evans, son of "Fighting Bob," are seen in the picture. The story tells of the efforts of the Romanian government to destroy the Atlantic squadron. Lieutenant Colton is in love with the daughter of a political leader, whose brother, Gilman, falls in his examinations at Annapolis. When Colton refuses to exercise undue influence in the boy's behalf he is ousted from his position and is placed in charge of a cooling steamer. Gilman, failing in his exams, enlists in the navy as an apprentice and goes through the experiences that the regular navy apprentice undergoes. Colton's sweetheart learns of a plot to blow up by mines the entire Atlantic fleet and Colton undertakes to frustrate their plan. The mines are to be set off from a merchant ship as the sails into the harbor. Colton, commanding the submarines, is shot through a torpedo tube to get to the surface and reach the vessel. Single handed, he fights his way to the levers controlling the mines and explodes them prematurely, thus saving the fleet from destruction. For this he is reappointed to his old position and Gilman's share in the heroic work wins him an appointment in the academy.

Society weaknesses and their effect on a young, impressionable girl, who later, when she reaches the full stature of womanhood, realizes the holiness of it all and does her best to make amends for her foolishness, is the story of Roy L. McCardell, underlying the big Equitable feature, "The Question," which is coming to the Oracle Theater on Sunday and Monday, with Marguerite Leslie in the stellar part.

Intent upon her social pleasures, she marries a man who loves children, and the disastrous results of her preferring dogs, cards, parties, and the other allurements of a society existence, to the normal existence of a home with a loving family, and powerfully presented. Her awakening to a realization of the evil she has wrought through her selfishness, and her brave acceptance of its results, with her supreme effort at recovering the beauties of life which she has cast away, give the star an opportunity for some intensely absorbing dramatic work. That she takes full advantage of the opportunities is a foregone conclusion, but it will require the seeing of the picture before a thorough knowledge of the depth and strength of her dramatic ability can be realized. The story conveys a powerful lesson, without trenching on the ground of sermonizing, and is presented in an appealing and convincing manner. It is well worthy of a place on the Equitable program.

SEAT SALE FOR THE PASSING SHOW

The seat sale for the biggest show to visit Ogden "The Passing Show of 1915" will open at the Orpheum next Friday morning and from all indications a big lineup will be on hand to secure tickets. A sold out house is looked for as this is the first time these Triangles Fine Arts permanent players several men were selected who were able to make up to represent more than a passing like-not only an additional establishment, employing many people but will also provide an outlet for considerable farm production.

The company is also pushing its work on improvements and additions to the Ogden sugar factory, being made at an approximate cost of $300,000 in order to care for the immense increase of acreage in northern Utah. In each of the five districts where sugar factories of the Amalgamated Sugar company have been located, the anticipation is that there will be a heavy enough yield to cause each factory to be operated to capacity during the 1915-17 run.

According to the plot, a band of international spies seize upon the invention of a flying torpedo and before a duplicate can be made by the inventor's assistant (the spies having killed the inventor) an invading force is actually intruded several miles inland. The perfection of the torpedo controlled by wireless enables the United States troops to rout the invader and bring the picture to a patriotic end.

Bessie Barriscale in "Bullets and Brown Eyes," Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Bessie Barriscale, the star whose screen triumphs have brought her to the front rank of film artists within the past year, is presented by Thomas H. Ince for the fourth time on the Triangle program in an absorbing war romance from the pen of J. G. Hawks, entitled "Bullets and Brown Eyes." The production is totally different from anything in which Miss Barriscale heretofore has appeared. "Bullets and Brown Eyes" is the tale of a Prince's wooing and winning of a countess. Its scenes are laid in the mythical countries of Bothalia and Marsow while they are at war, and are replete with thrilling battles. How the reckless prince of one country succeeds in his quest for the Countess of the other is beautifully told.

To the role of Countess Olga Miss Barriscale is said to contribute all the charm that has helped to make her a nationwide favorite. Her vivacity as well as her dramatic ability find ready outlet in the part.

An interesting fact in connection with the production is that it will serve to introduce a new leading man opposite Miss Barriscale. He is William Desmond, who supported Billie Burke in "Peggy," and his interpretation of the part of Prince Carl, "The Will of the Wisp," is said to be a splendid piece of work.
